BOOK UPDATE FROM REV. DR. CAROL KILBY:

I'm delighted that the reviews of my book, Evolutionary Dancer, Out, In, and On the Fringe of the Church, have been so meaningful. Clearly the story is connecting to many grieving the ecological crisis and longing for a future consciousness of One-Earth community. Being a self-published book, I am keeping busy figuring out how to offer it far and wide. AND SO.... Da dah! I'm inviting you to a Book Launch.

I'm hoping someone among the KUC, might accept an invitation to be one of my guests on the online-book launch of Evolutionary Dancer. The date is Earth Day, April 22, 7:30 – 8:30. Your role would be to share conversation for, at least, a 5-minute spot.

This would entail offering your comments on quotes from the book about our time together. These quotes would be chosen together with whoever would agree to be a guest. In other words, we'd have agreed on what we'll talk about beforehand. And of course, if you have something other to suggest, I'm open to that too. If you are otherwise committed but feel it something you could support, perhaps we could explore a recorded zoom conversation. Note: Carol has generously donated a copy of her book to KUC. This copy will be at the church on Easter Sunday.

IT'S BEEN SAID:

Independent record stores rule. They are the last refuge for those who are looking for music that's outside of the box or outside of this decade. - Chris Faller (The Hush Sound)

We don't get to see anybody like us when we grow up. For me, the first thing a movement tells me is that you are not alone. Sappho for Equality, India

We do not inherit the earth from our ancestors; we borrow it from our children. - Native American Proverb

There is nothing either good or bad but thinking makes it so. – William Shakespeare
